ONE Hosted Students from Tokyo University of Marine Science and Technology

On 25th and 26th March 2020, ONE collaborated with Symphony Creative Solutions (SCS) to host 6 students from Tokyo University of Marine Science and Technology. Despite complications, this event was organised as the students had a strong motivation to study global perspectives from different maritime professionals in Singapore.

The first day kicked off with 5 ONE staff sharing insights on the general container business, company operations, marine safety, container vessels and reefer containers. Team members from SCS also shared informative presentations on their business operations, the type of services they provide, and introduced the solutions that they are offering to ONE. Additionally, SCS introduced their Ocean of Opportunities (O3) Innovation Challenge, for which ONE is a long-time and proud supporter of.

Within the session, SCS staff also took the students and ONE staff on a short tour around Block 71, that has a long-standing history of supporting start-ups. During the entire duration of the presentations and tour, the Japanese students were enthusiastic to ask questions and it was truly an engaging session.

During this tough period where colleagues are working from home, we still managed to conduct a presentation via an online platform. The students stayed zealous and asked questions despite physically being at different places.

ONE Hosted Students from Tokyo University of Marine Science and Technology

On the second day, the Japanese students showed their flair and presented their ideas to some ONE and SCS staff. They combined their existing knowledge along with the materials presented to them to deliver potential solutions, and it was truly impressive.

We look forward to these bright students rising up to future volatile challenges and impacting the world positively with their creative and critical minds.
